Sally J. Walton, M.A.

At GSI we think of diversity not as a problem to be overcome, but as the sum total of the creative potential in every in every group and situation where people bring their culture, background, and experiences together. Our mission is to measurably improve the quality of organizational life for women and men of diverse backgrounds working together.

GSI offers consultation, training, and tools to assist you with the diversity challenges specific to your organization. We specialize in:

- Executive briefings on diversity and corporate culture change

- Assessment and program design, including curriculum, video, and production of printed materials
- Transcultural leadership, communication, and negotiation training
- The training of diversity trainers
- Individual and group coaching for executives and managers with specific diversity needs

Sally J. Walton, M.A. just joined the offices of George Simons International in Santa Cruz. Sally has almost fifteen years international experience in 3 very different cultures, and has traveled in 38 countries, plus an equal number of States in the U.S. In addition to her experience in geographical diversity, she has worked with many different corporate cultures. Sally Walton uses her expertise in effectively working with diverse cultures to help others to succeed in our changing world. Her work as a professional speaker, consultant, seminar leader, and author focuses on maximizing human performance with a global perspective. Her programs emphasize issues of global teamwork, leadership, and cultural/corporate diversity.
